Figure 1. Schematic diagram of the experimental design. The subjects were divided into two groups: the control group and the intervention group. The control group received a standard curriculum, while the intervention group received a curriculum that included a module on the effects of alcohol on the body. The subjects were then asked to complete a questionnaire about their drinking habits. The results of the questionnaire were used to calculate the mean number of drinks per week for each group. The control group had a mean of 1.5 drinks per week, while the intervention group had a mean of 1.0 drink per week. This difference was statistically significant ($p < 0.05$).
